 served by very attentive students doing their front-of-house training cost the equivalent of just £11.

We took a leisurely trip back along False Creek on a Rainbow Aquabus back to downtown.

There's no doubt you could spend a whole holiday in and around Vancouver itself but we wanted to look further inland so we drove back almost to Horseshoe Bay and picked up the intriguingly named Sea to Sky Highway and, climbing higher and higher into the Coastal Mountains, headed for the Winter Olympic village of Whistler.

It's a beautiful and easy drive of less than two hours.

"Leaving the city tower blocks behind, we found nature's skyscrapers as we walked among the treetops of mighty forests of larch and Douglas firs"

Winter sports are the principal attractions in season but the resort, with hotels, lodges, shops and restaurants, has lots to offer in the summer.

There are hundreds of walking routes and organised treks as well as plenty for the thrill-seeker. Several companies offer zip line adventures where you plunge, attached to a harness, down a steel cable through the trees. We took the gentler option of a Tree Trek, a wonderful 90-minute tour along wooden walkways suspended among the tops of giant pines. The minibus took us up to the start-point alongside the Olympic bobsleigh run and the route was mainly downwards. There are a few steps up and down but it was pretty easy going. Our guide explained what we were seeing in just the right amount of detail.

The Squamish Lil'wat Cultural Centre at Whistler demonstrates the art, culture and history of these two First Canadian Nations. We explored here in the clear mountain air and then strolled around the village and had a coffee in the Olympic Plaza where the opening and closing ceremonies were held.

After a night in Whistler we set off further into the mountains heading for Echo Valley Ranch and Spa.

We didn't realise just how remote this valley was. The last 20 miles or so are along a gravel road through forest and some grassy valleys where the cattle graze freely. We caught a rare glimpse of a lynx on this drive. At first we thought it was a small deer but the distinctive light colouring and long back legs confirmed it was one of these wild eats.

The nearest town is Clinton, once a hideout for outlaws on the run from the Mounties. Rumour is there are still some bad 'uns in the forest cabins people but usually around 24 are in residence. The and remote valleys.

The Echo Valley Ranch is an amalgam of west, east and... Essex. The first voice we heard was Sharon, the receptionist from Southend, and the at the ranch, looking after the horses and taking customers out on treks.

The eastern influence is from co-owner Nan, who is Thai and founded the resort with her husband Norm. Thais staff the spa and cook a food is produced by a professional chef and is eaten around a large table.

Cuests can ride, fish (we were the two anglers mentioned earlier - the trout weren't biting), walk, next person was her husband, who is the wrangler pan for gold and relax with a range of beauty and spa

> It's a peaceful place to chill out and take a walk accompanied by the ranch's collection of free-ranging sheep dogs.

A couple of days there and you could easily imagine yourself as a backwoodsman. Great food and wine, a comfortable lodge bed and the spa pool rather put and end to that daydream.

After the ranch we headed through a desert to sample great wine, just missed meeting a bear in a vineyard, and enjoyed food supplied by an Indian family from Southampton and an Italian coffee expert from Essex.

All will be revealed in part two of this feature next month, as well as more stunning British Columbia scenery.
